YANKS REDEEM BATAAN WITH BOLD INVASION

All Important Military Objectives Already In American Hands

JAPANESE DISORGANIZED

Landings Made After Big Guns Are Blasted Into Silence On Corregidor

MANILA, Feb. 17—American troops have redeemed historic Bataan with a bold sea-borne landing on the southern shores of the peninsula under the guns of Japanese-held Corregidor.

"We have captured Bataan," Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced in a triumphant communique.

Less than 48 hours after the landing, all the peninsula's militarily-important objectives were in American hands. MacArthur's troops were pursuing the disorganized enemy over the same dark ground where on April 11, 1942, some 30,000 Americans and Filipinos laid down their arms and began their tragic death march to Camp O'Donnell.

Covered by the big guns of the U. S. Seventh fleet and the bombs and bullets of hundreds of American warplanes, a big invasion convoy swept into the mouth of Manila bay at dawn Thursday to spill tanks, troops and guns ashore at Mariveles.

Japs Started The startled Japanese coastal defenders fought back briefly, then broke and fled into the hills under a storm of rockets and gunfire.

Corregidor's giant batteries, partially neutralized by days of continuous aerial and naval bombardment, fired a few bursts at the convoy but they were silenced quickly by salvoes after salvoes from American cruisers and destroyers.

Mariveles, where the remnants of the American-Filipino army embarked for Corregidor after the fall of Bataan three years ago, was captured by the first wave of attacking infantrymen, who found the town reduced to rubble by the preliminary air and sea barrage. All of the native population had fled before the attack began.

Reported Landing On Iwo Would Put First Yankees On Jap Soil

By United Press

The reported landing on Iwo Jima would put American troops on soil administered as part of the Tokyo prefecture for the first time.

The tiny gourd shaped island is strategically situated for use as an air base and observation point despite its small size and lack of developed harbors. It has an area of only eight square miles, but lies on a direct route from the Marianas to Japan. The Japanese Domei News Agency has pointed out that if Iwo fell to the Americans it would provide an escort base for B-29 Superfortresses.

Iwo lies in the range of the warm Japanese current and this is one of its driest months, despite the fact that this is considered part of the winter monsoon season.

Successful conquest of Iwo Jima would bring the Japanese capital within the range of land-based fighter planes and would free B-29 bases on the Marianas from the threat of enemy air raids.

The island has been built up by two volcanoes, Subibachi Yama on the southwest and Moto Yama on the northwest. The volcanoes are connected by a narrow neck of lowland.

Moto Yama rises 358 feet high in a flat-topped dome shape. It is completely surrounded by terraces cut by the waves and has a number of vents, some of which expel steam and sulphurous vapors. Subibachi Yama is an extinct volcano rising to 546 feet.

The volcanic islands, including Kita Iwo on the north and Minami Iwo on the south, were absorbed into the Japanese empire in 1891. The inhabitants of Iwo Jima are almost entirely pure Japanese, although somewhat taller than the usual inhabitants of the home islands. In 1940, the population was 1,151.

The largest village on the island is Higashi, less than a mile inland from the northeast coast. Other principal settlements are Minami, on the east central coast; Nishi, on the northwest; and Moto Yama, in the north central part of the island. The main villages are connected by roads and trails.

Corregidor's giant batteries, partially neutralized by days of continuous aerial and naval bombardment, fired a few bursts at the convoy but they were silenced quickly by salvoes after salvoes from American cruisers and destroyers.

Mariveles, where the remnants of the American-Filipino army embarked for Corregidor after the fall of Bataan three years ago, was captured by the first wave of attacking infantrymen, who found the town reduced to rubble by the preliminary air and sea barrage. TUG SEEKS TO RAISE PLANE IN WHICH 5 DIE

NEW YORK, Feb. 17—The Navy tug Siren was used today in an attempt to raise from Flushing Bay the wreckage of a B-29 believed to contain the bodies of Maj. William B. Southworth, 27, and four others.

The father, William (Billy) Southworth, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, arrived from Columbus, O., last night to await recovery of the body of his son, pilot of the Superfortress. The plane crashed Thursday afternoon after an unsuccessful attempt to land at La Guardia field with one dead motor.

PARIS, Feb. 17—Canadian First Army troops plunged forward more than two miles in the northern section of the Siegfried line today, cut the Goch-Calcar highway, and closed within a little more than a mile of both Goch and Calcar.

BULLETIN

LONDON, Feb. 17—The German high command said today that a Russian siege army had broken into Breslau, encircled capital of Silesia.

By United Press

The Canadian First Army drive on the Ruhr rolled forward today against stunned German troops shaken out of their Rhineland forts and pillboxes by a tremendous Allied aerial bombardment.

Stalled for almost 48 hours by a flaming wall of German guns thrown across the 17-mile corridor between the Maas (Meuse) and Rhine rivers, Gen. H. D. G. Crerar's troops were on the move again all along the front.

Hammering out gains of a mile or more, the British drove armored spearheads to within about two miles of the fortress towns of Goch and Calcar, barely 25 miles northwest of the Ruhr valley.

Late reports from the front said the Canadian First Army gains were extended to as much as four miles early today as the Nazis began to buckle under the attack.

Huns Softening

Field dispatches said Nazi resistance was softening under the shattering ground and air assault and the battle of the Rhineland appeared to be merging swiftly into the battle of the Ruhr.

The Soviet newspaper Pravda said today that Russian armored vanguards broke through to the Neisse river on a broad front to 12 miles from bomb-battered Cottbus, one of the main strongholds guarding the southern approaches to Berlin.

The 12 mile advance crumbled German defense positions on the lower reaches of the Luebst river, a tributary of the Neisse, and put the Russians within easy artillery range of Cottbus, a big railway hub on the Spree river 47 miles southeast of Berlin.

Northeast of Cottbus, other units of Marshal Ivan S. Konev's First Ukrainian Army sweeping along the west bank of the Oder river reached the outskirts of Crossen, 63 miles southeast of Berlin. This column was 17 miles from the first of the Oder bridgeheads which the Germans said the Red Army established east of the capital.

The southern wing of Konev's army, meantime, began a battle of annihilation against the encircled German garrison of Breslau, capital of Silesia. The encirclement was completed yesterday with the (Continued on Page Two)

Perkins Working On Plans To Bring Labor Agencies Into Bureau

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—The administration is working on plans to bring many of its labor agencies into the labor department.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins disclosed that experimental bills have been drawn up to achieve the reorganization she recommended in her annual report. She and other officials are studying the proposals.

Miss Perkins wants brought into her department the National Labor Relations Board, the War Manpower Commission's employment service and apprentice training, War Production Board's labor planning activities and certain functions of the War Labor Board.

She omitted the National Mediation Board, which handles railway representation and dispute cases, because of the objections of the railway brotherhoods. "It is all right where it is," she explained.

The NLRB, however, should be placed in the labor department for the development of a more uniform policy and because there has been "so much constant complaint by employers and unions" against the board, she said.

The NLRB receives its most severe criticism from the American (Continued on Page Two)

MAN WHO DID IT TELLS HOW TO LIVE 104 YEARS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 17—Capt. John Alden Howell celebrates his 104th birthday tomorrow with the same philosophy of life that he developed when he was a boy, riding beside "Stonewall" Jackson in the Civil War.

"If you want to be 104, make the 23rd Psalm part of your daily life, eat three square meals a day, keep your chin up and your temper under control," he said.

Capt. Howell is reported to be the oldest living officer of the Confederate Army, the oldest retired lawyer and the oldest Free Mason in America.

He retired from business in Waynesville, N. C., 19 years ago and moved to the home of his daughter here. Until that time he had been a lawyer and banker.

"He was a great man," Capt. Howell said of the famous praying and Psalm-singing "Stonewall" Jackson of the Civil War.

"He was a great general, all right," Capt. Howell said, adding that there are some "great" generals in this present war.

NAVY PLANES STILL POUNDING SMOKING JAPANESE CAPITAL

Nip Communique Declares Counter-Attack By Volcano Island Defenders Hurls Invaders Back Into Sea—Confirmation Lacking

ADMIRAL NIMITZ'S HEADQUARTERS, GUAM, Feb. 17—Radio Tokyo reported that American invasion forces stormed ashore on historic Corregidor and on Iwo island, only 750 miles south of Tokyo today while carrier planes still were blasting the smoking Japanese capital itself for the second straight day.

Only the carrier-based raids on Tokyo and a continuing aerial bombardment of Iwo were confirmed by official American sources, but the Japanese radio told of these developments along a 2,400-mile arc from Tokyo to Manila.

In the Volcano islands—American troops swarmed over the southwest and southeast beaches of Iwo after two landings only 10 minutes apart. Tokyo added the customary claim that the troops had been "repulsed" after fierce fighting.

Strike Corregidor

In the Philippines—American paratroops, dropping from transport planes, and sea-borne troops invaded Corregidor island at the entrance to Manila bay and fierce fighting is under way on the southern shores. The thrusts followed by only 48 hours an amphibious landing on the southern tip of Bataan, five miles north of Corregidor.

In the Izu islands—at least 200 American carrier planes have been attacking the stepping stone island of Hachijo, 200 miles south of Tokyo, since early yesterday.

In Japan—hundreds of American carrier planes, attacking in waves an hour and a half apart, raided Tokyo for at least eight and a half hours today following yesterday's raid of nine to 10 hours. A Tokyo newspaper said American forces may be planning to invade the Japanese homeland.

WAY CLEARED FOR WALLACE CONFIRMATION

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—House passage of the George bill cleared the way today for senate confirmation of Henry A. Wallace as secretary of commerce.

There appeared little doubt that Wallace would be confirmed after President Roosevelt signed the bill stripping the commerce job of control over the multi-billion dollar Reconstruction Finance corporation and its subsidiaries. The President has said he will sign it.

Senate Republican leaders conceded that house acceptance of the measure without amendments improved Wallace's chances for confirmation. They served notice however, that he wouldn't get the post without a fight. The senate vote on the Wallace nomination has been set for March 1.

Passage of the George bill confronts President Roosevelt with two problems.

In signing it he will be agreeing to deprive his former vice president of a vast amount of power.

In addition, it confronts the President with the task of appointing a new man to head the multi-billion-dollar federal lending operations.

of Mariveles and quickly established contact with spearheads of the Sixth Division advancing down the east coast of Bataan.

Lima and Lamao were captured by the Sixth's first regiment in an 11-mile advance south of Pilar and the junction was made at an undisclosed spot on the 15-mile coastal strip between Lamao and Mariveles.

The link-up sealed off several thousand Japanese in the mountainous and militarily-useless southwestern corner of Bataan. The survivors were badly scattered and disorganized, however, and it was indicated the fight had become a large-scale mopping-up operation.

A third American force was rapidly sealing off the west coast of Bataan in an advance south from Moron toward the highway terminus at Bagac, 13 airline miles northwest of Mariveles.

Tribute To Navy
MacArthur's communique paid high tribute to the governing support of Vice Adm. Thomas C. Kinkaid's Seventh Fleet under direct command of Rear Adm. A. D. Struble and Russell Berky, particularly the daring minesweepers that combed the approaches to Mariveles bay for two days under direct fire from Corregidor.

United Press War Correspondent Richard G. Harris who went ashore with the landing forces reported that the tiny minesweepers ranged off the beaches almost up to the moment of the attack.

The landing was led by Col. Ralph Paddock, Frankfort, Ind., under Brig. Gen. William C. Chase, El Paso, Tex., who was promoted to command of the 38th Division after leading the dramatic liberation of Allied prisoners from the Santo Tomas concentration camp a few weeks ago.

The triumph on Bataan momentarily overshadowed the savage battle still raging in the streets of Southern Manila. Units of the American 38th Infantry Division, the 11th Airborne and the First Cavalry were slowly chopping down the enemy's major pocket of resistance on the Manila waterfront in and directly south of the old walled city.

The mopping up was proceeding more swiftly, although the remaining Japanese still were fighting for every barricaded house and street corner in the city.

Marikina and Santo Nino village 5-1/2 miles east of Manila were captured, and American units on the southeastern outskirts of the capital seized two airfields at Mandaluyong and fought their way to the west gate of Fort McKinley.

SNOW REPLACES EXPECTED ZERO WEATHER HERE

Zero temperatures failed to arrive in Pickaway county Friday night but a new snow covered the ground Saturday morning.

An inch of snow had been recorded at 7 a. m. Saturday. Low temperature was 29. Weather Observer Roy Hawkes reported. Friday's high was 51.

The Scioto river reached its highest stage for months Saturday, a mark of 6.82 feet being recorded. This was about two feet higher than Friday's reading.

Circleville apparently escaped the worst part of the snow storm. Part of the south half of the state was blanketed under from four to five inches of snow. At Chillicothe a heavy snowfall was reported while a few miles north of Circleville there was no snow. Snow started falling here shortly before midnight Friday, several hours after it hit farther south.

landing on Japan itself may be near. Another warned without elaboration that American forces may "attempt to come near the homeland at two points, one of them the Boso peninsula," Western arm of Tokyo bay and site of the Yokosuka naval base.

Domei said American forces began landing operations on Futatabe beach in southwest Iwo about 10:30 a. m. (9:30 p. m. Friday, EWT.) but were "completely smashed."

"Following the failure, all enemy troops withdrew far out to sea," the broadcast said.

Ten minutes later—10:40 a. m.—American troops began landing on Kamiyama beach on the southeastern tip of the tiny eight-square-mile island, Domei said.

"Our garrison troops going into action to engage these enemy forces successfully repulsed them, with severe losses inflicted on the invaders," it asserted.

The broadcast, while saying that the second landing had been "repulsed," notably made no claim that these forces also had withdrawn.

WALISA ADMITS BURGLARY OF ESMERALDA CO.
Another one of the series of local burglaries had been cleared up and part of the loot recovered, Chief McCrady announced Saturday.
He said Henry Arthur Walisa, West Union street, accused of the Mecca restaurant burglary, had admitted breaking into the Esmeralda Canning company January 6. Several wrenches stolen from the canning company have been recovered, the chief said. Finding of the tools led to Walisa's admission that he took them, Chief McCrady stated.
Walisa was bound over to the grand jury under $500 bond Friday when he was arraigned before Mayor Ben H. Gordon on charges of burglarizing the Mecca restaurant.

Germans Blasted

More than 3,500 American and British warplanes set the west front offensive rolling yesterday afternoon, laying a terrible pattern of bombs and gunfire across the Maas-Rhine bottleneck. Elements of eight Nazi divisions were caught in the path of the aerial scythe and buried in the wreckage of their fortified villages and field fortifications.

Every German stronghold and battery in a five mile arc around Goch and Calcar was blasted with rockets, bombs and cannon-fire, and the nearby villages of Weeze, Hassum and Asperden rocked for hours under an almost continuous bombardment.

Other bombers ranged 20 miles east and 12 miles north of Goch to pound the Rhine crossings at Wesel and Rees.

Canadian, English and Scots infantrymen moved out of their muddy foxholes while the bombs were still falling up ahead and began rooting dazed Nazi troopers out of the wreckage of houses and earthworks all along the attack front.

Hundreds of bomb-crazed Germans were reported surrendering, although at some points the Nazi commanders mustered small tank and infantry formations and attempted localized counter-attacks, all unsuccessful.

In the first few hours after the bombing, upwards of 800 prisoners

WINORR HOST TO GROWERS OF CANNING CROPS

About 175 growers of crops for the Winorr Canning company were guests Friday night at a dinner meeting in the First Methodist church.

The program was staged in cooperation with the county extension service and County Agent F. K. Blair served as toastmaster.

Speakers were John A. C. R. Barnhart, president and general manager of the Winorr company, told of the various ways of packing canned goods for the armed services and pointed out improvements made since 1942. A display of the products was exhibited.

Perkins Working On Plans To Bring Labor Agencies Into Bureau

Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The two big labor organizations will battle to a showdown in congress when the AFL attempts to get the National Labor Relations Act amended to prohibit the board from declining in what units employees shall vote for a bargaining representative. The AFL wants the employees themselves to decide whether they will vote by crafts, departments or by entire plants.

Miss Perkins, who parried questions on her future, is believed eager to complete a consolidation program to be started through congress as soon as the war in Europe ends.

President Roosevelt placed no strings on his request that she continue in her post, but she was reported prior to the inauguration as earnestly wanting to be replaced. Some sources believe she may not remain in office long beyond the end of the European war.

STORM DAMAGE TO ROADS MAY PASS $8,000,000

COLUMBUS, Feb. 17 — State Highway Director Perry T. Ford said today that the $8,000,000 requested by the department for state highway maintenance and repair may be inadequate because of storm damage as a result of the inclement winter.

"In the face of the bad winter, we should have twice as much as we are going to get," Ford said. "It is my opinion that we will not have money enough to do more than save the capital investment in our highways."

"It will be the purpose of the department to protect the capital investment until the end of the war."

The highway department already has prepared plans for an extensive highway repair and construction program when manpower and materials are available after the war.

ARMY ORDER ON JUMPING 4-Fs IRKS CHANDLER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17—Mutterings were heard on Capitol Hill today over the Army's decision to put job-quitting 4-Fs into war plants as soldiers in uniform at G. I. pay.

Sen. A. B. "Happy" Chandler, D. Ky., a member of the senate military affairs committee, said he would ask the committee to send for the war department order for training and assignment of drafted 4-Fs.

"I think caution should be exercised when it comes to ordering people around," he said. "I think we'll want to study that order and see if there is a basis in law for it."

The Army announced yesterday that 4-Fs inducted under selective service's new limited "work or fight" order would receive four weeks of basic training at Camp

CONRAD BABY DIES IN CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL

Richard Gay Conrad, twin son of Mr. and Mrs. Gay B. Conrad, 315 Watt street, died Saturday at 5 a. m., in Children's hospital, Columbus, where he had been taken about three weeks ago. His twin brother, Donald Philip, is a patient also in the hospital where they had submitted to surgery. The children were born December 28 in Berger hospital.

In addition to the parents, a brother, Barry, 3, survives.

The father, who is a seaman, second class, in the U. S. Navy, is home on leave from his base at San Diego, Calif.

Funeral arrangements, in charge of the Deffenbaugh funeral home, have not been completed.

Ellis, near Peoria, Ill.

After the four weeks those with special skills who offered to do war work would be allowed to take jobs as civilians at prevailing wages, but would be carried on the rolls of the enlisted reserve corps and subject to immediate recall if they quit their war jobs.

Those with special skills who did not volunteer, the Army said, would be put in government war plants where they would work "as uniformed soldiers" — presumably at army pay; $50 a month.

Those without needed skills or a desire to do war work would be assigned to "various operating installations" in the Army.

Saboteurs Sentenced To Hang

ERIC Gimpel, left, and William Colepaugh have been sentenced "to be hanged by the neck until dead" by a seven-man military commission in New York, who found them guilty of espionage and sabotage. The pair landed on the Maine coast from a Nazi submarine November 29, 1944, and were captured in the New York area by FBI agents in December. Colepaugh is American-born, having been discharged from the U. S. Navy, while Gimpel is a native of Germany. Both were specially trained as Nazi espionage agents.

THE ALTERNATIVE IS WAR

PERHAPS the plans of the Crimean Conference are not all that might be wished. But it is always well to be clear, not only about objectives, but about alternatives.

The objective in this case is lasting peace. The alternative is war. Perpetual peace is an ideal too far ahead for people now living to visualize. But a peace hard to break—a durable peace—can be attained if nationals of the United Nations put their minds and wills on attaining it.

In thinking about these present plans—which include the Dumbarton Oaks proposals and a conference at San Francisco in April to consider possible modifications of them—it is well never to lose sight of what will happen if something of this sort is not adopted. Without an international organization dedicated to the preservation of peace, the alternative is another war.

War means poverty, dislocation of life, battles, bombs, wounds, disfigurements, death. Peace means a chance for the present and to future ones a chance to improve their won world.

Let the citizen, giving careful thought, face facts. In a world of radio and robot bombs no nation can live alone, safe and happy inside its own borders. When tempted to compare present plans with perfection, let the citizen realize that his choice is not between effort and perfection. His choice is between imperfect, honest effort and war.

FIGHTING FOOLS

THERE is seldom any clear logic about Nazi statements, but a current announcement from Germany, delivered by Dr. Paul Schmidt, a pal of Hitler's, seems crazier than usual. Sensing defeat, he declares: "Millions of us will wage guerrilla warfare. Every German before he dies will try to take five or ten enemies with him to the grave."

This statement suggests a return to the age of chivalry, (more properly called an age of lunacy) when silly combatants often fought to the death as lightly as we play ball games, "just for the heck of it." To them it suggested glory and manhood. But by any rational estimate, based on modern intelligence and respect for human life, such medievalism is both tragic and absurd.

Some people are always paying debts and others always collecting them, but it comes to about the same thing in the long run.

A citizen claims he can balance a lawnmower on his chin while climbing up and down a ladder. Well, that's about all you could do with that gadget at this season.

War Department's Switch
On Labor Draft Scored

Controversy on Williams
"Junior Wallace" Battle

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Unwittingly or not, the war department gave the House-approved labor draft bill a severe setback when it switched its position on the question of where responsibility for compulsory manpower controls should lie.

The department's action led directly to the Senate committee arranging for secret hearings on the bill and it gave opponents of the legislation time to organize for a fight in the Senate.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D.) of Colorado revealed the war department's move. He said that after the committee had ordered the bill favorably reported to the Senate, certain committee members came in and said the war department favored giving final responsibility to local draft boards instead of to War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Recalling that the department had joined with other agencies in urging that Byrnes be given overall authority, Johnson branded the department's shiftabout as an example of "dirty double-crossing."

Afterward he announced that Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson had telephoned him and said it was all a mistake, and that the department still wanted Byrnes to have the responsibility.

But the explanation did not cancel the consequences.

Williams, former head of the National Youth Administration, is finding plenty of opposition during the course of current hearings by the Senate agriculture committee on his fitness for the post.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17 — Best news of the Crimea conference was not made public. Russia is to become a full ally of the United Nations by joining us against Japan. Published "beliefs" of senators are founded on definite word from returning officials. It seems genuine enough, and not an off-the-record hint to gain public support for the conference.

Stalin can hardly be expected to stand by and let American-British influence sweep through Asia. That would mean British repossession of Hongkong and restoration in Shanghai, etc.

Supposition is widespread that Russia will move into the Asia war from the April 25th peace meeting at San Francisco (because her treaty with Japan expires then). But this guess is more logical than sound. The proper military hour to strike may be more suitable than the proper political hour. Stalin has always contended he could not fight on two fronts (as we are) and he may therefore adjust his Asiatic plans to diminishing European necessities.

This was the main invisible result of Yalta, and little secret is being made of it, probably because the Japs cannot do much in the redistribution of their over-committed forces to meet it.

Visible results of the gathering are less inspiring, although they have been received practically without criticism. No pledges were needed for the annihilation of Germany, now so near. The Nazi nation is to be divided into three sectors for policing by Soviets, British and Americans at least; this is an old decision, and may not work out efficiently. Conflicts and confusion are likely to result from three or more administrations. The Polish and Yugoslavian settlements mean that a couple of democrats will be thrown into the Communist government, and a free election for all will be held some day, the degree of freedom being not yet apparent. That is about all there was to it on paper. The world peace organization arrangements are being held invisible until approved by France and China.

Yet behind this conference was an impelling motive which must be obvious although it is not being mentioned. Mr. Roosevelt thought he had to get wayward and isolationist Russia into something definite before the end of the war. Apparently he got them back into the Dumbarton Oaks mood, from which they had withdrawn, and kept hanging in air for many months. Chief result of the conference, then is this:

We are now in Europe, into every argument about every crossroads, every cabinet appointment everywhere. We are in, because we insisted Mr. R. had to go to Stalin to get this agreement. Stalin did not come to us. What we get out of it is not yet apparent. Our motive is that we want to do good for the world. If we are to get trade territory, or any tangible restitution agreement for such return is yet to be made. Reparations are to be run from Moscow, which means forced labor and totalitarian harshness — a Russian settlement. All our other plans call for pouring out money, not taking in anything.

Our ideal is democracy, and this we are to promote in Europe against the Russian ideal of organization for the state suppression of opposition and minorities, elections which are won with 99.8 percent of the vote against .2 percent by use of pressure and force. It is undeniable then that this agreement does not, as they say, establish the peace of Europe, but opens the political

DIET AND HEALTH

SOME FACTS ABOUT COLDS

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen,

President, Chicago Board of Health

I suppose that if you inquired of a group of people as to whether or not sitting in a draft would cause them to catch cold, the answer would be "yes" for the most part. The idea that a sudden change of temperature is likely to bring on a cold, and that drafts have something to do with catching cold, is backed up by scientific evidence.

Not so long ago a report was made by Doctor Joseph N. Kler of New Brunswick, New Jersey, concerning a study of about 5,500 employees of a large industrial plant. It was noted that every time there was a sudden drop in temperature a greater number of employees seemed to come down with colds. These colds developed in a day or two. In the shipping department of this industrial concern, where it was unusually drafty, the employees had more colds than those working in less drafty parts of the plant. In those who worked in air-conditioned plants, where the temperature was maintained at a fairly even level, the number of colds was much less.

Some other interesting facts were brought out by this study. For example, women seemed to catch cold more often than men and they had their colds most frequently at the time of their regular periods. Those between twenty and thirty years of age had colds most often, while those above fifty had the least number. The smallest number of colds was found among the workers who moved about at their jobs. Those who sat down to do their work seemed to catch cold more easily. Smoking did not seem to have any effect—one way or the other.

In industrial plants, employers are interested not only in the number of colds from which their employees suffer, but also in how long these colds last and how much loss of time from work they cause. It would appear that little time would be lost from work if colds were promptly treated and not neglected. It is true that there is no specific treatment for colds. That is, there is no medicine which will cause them to disappear promptly, but — with rest in bed and the use of such drugs as the physician may prescribe to relieve the symptoms by taking plenty of fluids and keeping warm and comfortable — it is probable that the duration of the cold can be shortened.

Many physicians favor the use of the sulfa drugs for certain patients with colds in order to prevent secondary complications, such as ear, gland and lung infections—all of which may be serious.

It is always a good plan to avoid drafts and chilling, not only to help prevent colds but other disorders as well.

A NUMBER OF SYMPTOMS

There are times when I have a tired feeling and my ears ring and feel clogged up. When this happens everything goes black and I have to sit down. What causes this? . . . O. D. S.

ANSWER

It is impossible without a careful study to tell the cause of your trouble. It may be due to some disturbance of the internal ear. On the other hand, it may be due to some disorder of the circulation. You should consult your physician at once in order to determine the cause of the difficulty so that proper treatment may be carried out.

CHAPTER-THIRTY-ONE

Aggie hurried along and, presently, he was in the main cellar.

There, he decided, the person who had set out the bottle would have his best chance — if, indeed, that person had any idea of attacking him. Aggie crouched low and moved among bulky, invisible objects toward the stairs. He hit something and felt it yield and fall away. The feeling was followed by a crash. He had tipped over a wheelbarrow loaded with broken flowerpots. He swore and recklessly switched on his light, from behind a pillar. He shot it around the vast, crowded, dusty furnace room. Nothing there. He kept it on and raced toward the steps, past the furnace. He had nearly gained his objective when he stopped. His light held on the ash-strewn floor for an instant. A bone — a real bone — lay in the dust. A bone gnawed bare — or boiled bare — he did not have time to determine.

The cellar lights flashed on and a voice at the head of the stairs called, "Who's that?"

"Me! Aggie!" He felt enormously relieved. "It's me, Jack!" The manager of the club was standing at the head of the stairs with a revolver in his hand. He was wearing a dressing gown and bedroom slippers. He grinned faintly. "My God, Aggie," he said, "how you do get around! What in the world are you doing there?"

"Trying to get out," Aggie said honestly. "And somebody's in this hole — somewhere." He was running up the stairs. He pulled Jack into the pantry, slammed the door, and locked it. "That ought to hold him. I'll call Wes and —"

He broke off. In the club kitchen, staring at him, were several people. Beth and Martha and Bill Calder. Ralph Patton and Byron Waite. Most surprising, Wes Wickman, in his uniform, looking extraordinarily disheveled. There were grass stains on his hands and there was dirt on his shoes. He was breathing hard but unobtrusively, as if he had recently been engaged in some form of work, and as if he were trying to make that fact unnoticeable. Leaves of sliced bread, a leg of lamb, mustard pickles, were ranged on the center table.

Wes said, "Who's in the cellar, Aggie?"

"I don't know. I —" Beth said. "You look as if you'd been pulled through a knothole! A filthy knothole. Walking in your sleep, I suppose?"

Wes leaned against a huge refrigerator. "Just what in the name of sin does this mean, Aggie? You were first to find Calder. First to find George Davis. First to send out the alarm. And now — while I'm frantically at work over at the Davis place — I get a frenzied message from Sarah — old John saying to go save your life in the club cellar. What's there?"

"Somebody," Aggie answered. "Look. For heaven's sake — get your men and have that cellar searched."

The state trooper considered. "All right."

Jack spoke. "There maybe was somebody down there, at that! Aggie — did you notice if the windows in the furnace room were open, when you went down?"

"No. They were not, that is." "Open now. Two of 'em."

Aggie said, "I didn't notice that. Then — the person's gone." He looked from face to face. All the expressions were doubtful, accusative. Even the trooper's. That increased his feeling of frustration and of defeat. He needed sleep. He was weak and nervous. He was angry, too. "Huh! Why ask me what I was doing here? What are all of you doing?"

Byron Waite said hastily, "I presume you expected me to go back to sleep after the racket you raised at my place? I went over to the Davis house. All the lights were on. I sat with the servants."

"We went there, too," Beth said. "We heard the sirens. Bill and Martha and I. As soon as we could dress. We left Martha's mother asleep — at least — she didn't get up when we did. We shoed us away and so we all came up here."

"I was just getting up," Jack said. "They began banging on the door. I let 'em in. Nobody's going to sleep any more tonight — so we're making sandwiches. Heard a crash in the cellar. I got the club gun. The Lord knows we're all on edge!"

Wes said dryly, "I think, Aggie, that I ought to ask the questions. Don't you?"

Aggie was on the point of answering when the pantry door was shoved open. Several more people in various stages of dishabille tramped into the club kitchen. They were asking, "What's wrong?" and "What's happened to the Davises?" with the ad-libbed unanimity of a stage crowd. Aggie looked at them disgustedly.

"You go down to your house, Aggie," Wes said. "I'll come along as soon as I take a squirt in the cellar. Five minutes. I want to talk to you. I want to talk to you."

When Aggie re-entered his aunt's cottage — at a dog trot — he saw that Danielle had gone. It gave him a brief sense of dissatisfaction. Sarah had a good fire going. There were sandwiches on the coffee table — and cups. The old lady was lying back in the inglenook, and she greeted him acidly. "You've been gone a thundering long while!"

"I had a lot of ground to cover," Wes said.

Aggie knew what she meant. He sat down on a bench and leaned over the coffee container. "Gone," he said. "Nothing in the safe."

Sarah pursed her lips. A thin, pensive whistle came through them. "Gone, eh?"

"How much was it, Sarah?" She shrugged. "The last statement showed — around a million."

"A tidy sum to carry off, huh?" He dumped sugar directly from a bowl. "I wondered. You know, I forgot to ask. I generally forget all the important things. I wondered if we were talking about a hundred thousand — or some horrendous sum — like a hundred million."

"Nobody around here has that sort of mazzuma," Sarah replied. "And that gold and my platinum wouldn't just be carried off — either. It weighed about a ton, I should imagine."

Aggie thought a moment. "So it did! Huh. Mean several trips. How was it — packed? Or was it?" "In sawdust — in starch boxes. The starch boxes were in wine cases — four to a case. The whole thing was designed to weigh the same as a case of wine."

He sipped coffee. "I honestly think — at the moment — I'm Wes Wickman's principal suspect!"

"You!" Sarah leered. "And no wonder! Well, start talking!"

He told her. He told her sketchily, at first, and in detail, as Wes's "fifty minutes" became ten and then twenty and at last, half an hour. They waited, when he had finished talking, with an impatience that blotted out fatigue and sleepiness.

Wes appeared, at last. He looked grim. His face was even more disquieted. "There was nobody in that cellar but the cops. They've been scrambled over. I've hardly slept since Calder died. I was out last night on Bogarty leads. I went to bed this evening and I left word that I wasn't to be disturbed for anything. My lieutenant woke me when you called about Davis."

He grinned shortly. "I'd have demoted him if he hadn't. Now, see here, Phil. You found the doctor. You broke in where he was. You've rummaged all the way to that safe in the club cellar — yeah! — that's where I've just been. You're going to have the devil's own time explaining your actions — and I wish you'd begin now."

Wes drank up after cup of coffee. He did not once interrupt. He showed amazement at the story about the cops. He gazed at Sarah. He muttered, when Aggie described the situation in which he had found Davis's body. But he did not talk.

After it was finished, he closed his eyes. "Aggie," he said at last, "I know darned well you're telling the truth. I'd have pushed along just about the same way you did. But you — and Sarah — realize that in the morning you're going to face a mob of reporters!"

"I've been thinking of it," Sarah said.

"They'll be all over the scene. Great story. A million in unlawful gold hidden away. Two peculiar deaths. A colorful prospector missing. It'll crowd Hitler off the front pages. This place will be crammed with sightseers. Reporters will be trying to beat us — the police — to an answer. What is the answer?"

SUCCESS of many No Trump contracts depends on getting a lead of your long suit or the dummy's — especially the dummy's — before the defenders have a chance to knock out the side re-entry for the suit. In such a case, it is often wise to refuse to hold up your ace in the suit originally led, for fear that the opponents will then switch and shoot at that re-entry.

South could tell North had diamonds stopped. From his own holding, it is obvious North had no strength in clubs. From East's bid and his own hearts, it was clear North's side strength was not in that suit. It therefore must be in diamonds. Bidding his clubs on his second turn would have been better tactics than calling No Trumps, as that would have enabled North to become the No Trump declarer, with any possible diamond original lead being up to North's holding, not through it.

But South could have made his contract if he had observed basic principles. West led the 10 of his partner's heart bid, which South allowed to win. West, seeing the diamond entry for the spades, led his diamond 2. The Q went in and the K won. East fired back the diamond 10, which was ducked, and the A won the third diamond. Spades were led then. East held up the A twice. Seeing the suit was killed, South switched to clubs, running three of them and the heart A and being down two.

If South had won the opening heart and immediately led spades, he could have brought in the suit, as the diamond A would have been there for a re-entry. The defenders could have scored only one spade and three hearts against him, leaving him nine definite tricks for his game.

Your Week-End Question

What is the main reason for hesitating about bidding a suit not topped by fair honor strength against two opponents who are bidding other suits?

Chillicothe kept its place at the top of the South Central Ohio league Friday night by defeating Hillsboro 31-19 at Hillsboro while the Tigers were taking a beating at Greenfield. McClain moved into second place.

Hillsboro ganged up on big Neil Johnston and held him to two points but Dick McCloskey got 13. ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 12:14.

On a Sabbath day Jesus restored a man's withered hand, saying, "It is lawful to do well on Sabbath day." But the Pharisees held a council against Him.

Jesus' mother and brother wanted to speak to Him. He was told, but Jesus pointed to His disciples and said, "Behold My mother and My brethren."

Jesus told the parable of the sower, the disciples asking why he talked in parables. Jesus answered because only so could He make folk understand.

Jesus' town folk were offended with Him; He said, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country." MEMORY VERSE—James 1:17.

Circleville Tigers Take 42-14 Drubbing At Greenfield McClain

Circleville high school cagers took their worst beating of the season Friday night at Greenfield, when the McClain Tigers won 42-14.

Everybody on the Circleville team seemed to be off while the Greenfield boys played good basketball all the way. The Tigers got few shots and missed most of the ones they did get. The bigger McClain boys got most of the rebounds and controlled the ball much of the time.

The first quarter was close and ended 11-9 in Greenfield's favor. During the second quarter Circleville scored two points. They got two more in the third period and only one in the final count.

Leading the parade of Greenfield scorers was Thompson, subbing for White who was resting a sprained ankle. Thompson banged in 14 points. Jim Dade was high for Circleville with seven points, all scored in the first half.

Uhl started the game's scoring and Jack Hennis matched his basket a moment later. Thompson made the score 3-2, then 5-2. Dade sank a bucket and foul to tie the score at 5-5. Thompson hit again and Uhl counted another bucket to run the score to 9-5 before Dade clicked. Glassner made it 11-7 and Hennis scored before the period ended.

Greenfield ran the count to 15-9 before Dade counted the Circleville basket of the second quarter and the half ended 18-11. The count was 22-11 in the second half when Hennis got the Circleville basket for the third period. The score was 41-13 when Earl Palm made the Circleville point in the final moments of the game.

Only three personal fouls were called on Greenfield. The Tigers were penalized 11 times and Greenfield made six of their 15 fouls shots good. The Tigers made two of their three attempts.

Circleville reserves also lost but by a narrower margin, the final score being 35-26. D. Elberfeld led the winners with 14 points. Rod Heine was high with eight for Circleville. The score was tied 6-6 the first period and Greenfield led 18-10 at the half.

Notes . . . Circleville visitors to Greenfield ran into a snow storm on the way there and drove back in more . . . It was hard to believe when they arrived

New Snow Adds To Already Heavy Winter Cost In District

COUNTY SPENDS $10,355 AND END NOT IN SIGHT

12,000 Working Hours Put In Moving Snow And Ice From Roads

County and city officials Saturday were wondering how much more money they would be forced to spend to keep streets and roads open to traffic.

Pickaway county's worst winter in years has proved very expensive in Circleville and Pickaway county. In addition to the inconvenience and private expense, county and city employees worked almost continuously for nine weeks to keep roads and streets open.

Saturday's snow brought new worries to service crews which are beginning to get caught up on regular work after devoting all their time to snow and ice removal.

Heavy Expense

County Engineer Henry T. McCrady said Saturday his department had spent $10,355.63 for snow removal and ice control on the various county roads from December 6, 1944, to February 6, 1945. His department used 1200 tons of sand and cinders, 50 tons of calcium chloride and 15 tons of salt, all record amounts for one winter while trying to keep roads open.

County workmen, who moved snow and tried to remove ice, put in 11,985 working hours during the period, Engineer McCrady said.

Although Circleville does not have more than 200 miles of highways that cover the county, the city's expenses were high. Service Director Clarence Helvering said his department worked overtime for two months. More ice removing materials were used than in any recent year. Many tons of snow were hauled from downtown streets.

State Also Busy

County and city expenses do not begin to cover the cost of the winter. State highway department crews also put in long hours and used tons of materials on state highways in the county. Township equipment was kept busy unblocking drifted highways. More expense will be necessary when spring finally arrives and repair of roads damaged by the winter begins. Freezing damaged many semi-permanent roads and streets, but the extent of the damage will not be known until warm weather arrives to stay.

Aside from the roads other thousands of dollars in damage was done by the cold weather. Farm damage is expected to run high in some areas. Although it is too early to tell, some farmers believe the wheat crop was hurt by the extended cold spell. Much feed was lost because it was frozen and could not be taken into feed lots.

Add to these items the wear and tear on automobile tires spinning vainly to move cars from curbs; damage done to cars skidding off the road or into other cars; frozen radiators; extra supplies of coal needed, etc., and the winter's cost runs into high finance.
